

The media is not meant to be a tool to promote only one point of view or one source of information, but a means to distribute information from many different origins containing various viewpoints, ideas, concerns and opinions. If we allow many different media sources to be owned by one corporation, that ideal could very well be jeopardized.